THE TIMES

WARRIOR

The Horse the Germans could not kill died yesterday.

Yesterday, our english hero Warrior died at the age of 32. He was also called « the Horse the Germans Could not Kill », quite a special name knowing that horses usually easy to kill. That's what made him special, different than any other horse. He served throughout the entire war, and he had to face many ordeals. In addition of that, he survived fightings in the Somme area and Ypres.

Warrior was very courageous and was of a great help during the war. Just the fact that he lived 32 years after what he went through during the war : he had to survive many days without drinking or any food ; only sacrificing himself running through the trenches to rescue soldiers. He once heard a shell noise from behind and ran into the soldier in danger and pushed him away from the shell.

After the war, he participated in Victory parades and everyone, in every single city in which he served during the war recognised him. Everyone who had the chance to meet him always gave him something to eat to congratulate him.

REST IN PEACE OUR COURAGEOUS
HERO WARRIOR
